

BOARD TOOK NO ACTION ON PLAN TO WIDEN STREET

Supervisors Adjourn After Discussing Tax Levy Next Year

The county board of supervisors completed the business to come before the September session late yesterday afternoon and adjourned until December after Supervisor D. H. Spencer, sponsor of the project to widen Ottawa and Galena avenue and Second street around the court house square had told the board that the building committee had no report or recommendation to make on the proposal.

The finance committee presented several reports to the board covering tax levies for the ensuing year. The committee recommended the appropriation of $76,405 to be used in the operation of the county's offices, representing a tax levy not to exceed 17 cents on the $100 valuation. The amount set aside for the payment of mother's pension was $12,000, an additional levy of two and one-half cents. The county highway levy was slashed in half, the amount appropriated being $21,000 or a levy not to exceed five cents. The appropriation last year totaled $45,000. The amount appropriated for the county tuberculosis fund was $30,000 or a levy not to exceed seven and one-half cents.

The town accounts committee report showed the Dixon town tax to amount to $15,915 with $15,000 for the road and $9,719 and city bond tax of $15,000.

The judiciary committee reported four applications having been filed requesting blind pensions. Three of these were disallowed and it was recommended the other applicant to be sent to a blind vocational school.

Explained Proposal
President W. F. Aydelotte was granted ten minutes to appear before the board in its final session, during which time he further explained the provisions of the recommendation filed with the board, seeking the setting aside of a special fund to be known as the Lee County Taxpayers Association Fund.

Supervisor L. D. Hemenway of the road and bridge committee called the attention of the board to the proposed plan of adopting a state system of accounting in the office of the County Superintendent of Highways, which was requested at the June meeting. He explained that at the June meeting the estimated cost of the installation of the system was fixed at about $600 but that this had been reduced to about $150. County Superintendent of Highways, Fred Leake, also addressed the board with reference to the system and the road and bridge committee was instructed to conduct a further investigation and report at the December meeting of the board.

Veterinarian Reported
Dr. R. R. Dwyer, county bovine officer, presented his report to the board, showing the activity since the June meeting. The report showed 350 herds having been tested with a total of 6,310 cattle and 53 reactors. But one herd, he stated, remained to be tested on the original first test.

The distribution of the canned food received from the Rader pantry, the board decided, is to be made to the various townships of the county, according to the population and need for such aid.

Grand Jurors Named
At the final session of the board the following were named members of the Lee county grand jury for the January term of the circuit court:
Alto, Elie Espe; Amboy, Edwin A. Coats; Ashton, Frank Bassler; Bradford, Charles Schmucker; Brooklyn, Gust Englehart; China, Frank E. Winger; Dixon, Lee Dyar; Henry T. Noble; East Grove, Louis Bonitz; Hamilton, Nicholas Gramer; Harmon, Tony Keenan; Lee Center, Louis Chao; Marion, John Blackburn; May, James McMahon; Nachusa, Lee Brink; Nelson, William O. Rogers; Palmyra, Jacob Heckman; Reynolds, Henry Vogler; South Dixon, Arthur Natziger; Sublette, Frank Myers; Vandalia, Henry Glaser; Willow Creek, Eddie Jacobson; Wyoming, Raymond Willard.

France To Undertake Big Loan Conversion

Paris, Sept. 17—(AP)—The largest loan conversion plan ever undertaken, providing for converting about $3,400,000,000 worth of French government bonds, was approved by the Chamber of Deputies today.

The vote on the measure, in the special session called for the purpose, was 450 to 48.

Finance Minister Louis Germain-Martin told the deputies that it was the first time in a plan which would include a consolidation loan to absorb the outstanding budgetary and railroad deficits, balancing of the budget in 1933 and a number of measures intended to stimulate home and foreign commerce.

The new bonds will be issued at 1 1/2 per cent. Lucien Lamoureux, budget reporter, said reasonable success of the conversion plan would save the country about $52,000,000 a year and that more than half this saving would be applied to make up the heavy budget deficit.

REPUBLICANS OF OHIO TO HONOR PARTY BUILDERS

Meet to Dedicate Ten Tablets At Jefferson Today

Jefferson, O., Sept. 7—(AP)—The call to political battle went out to Ohio Republicans today near the scene where 76 years ago the first draft of their party's first national platform was written.

A tribute to the author of those policies—Joshua Reed Giddings—was a part of the ten-hour program in which 1932 state party leaders sounded the challenge to thousands of persons to drive for a November victory.

The rally opened with the dedication of 10 bronze tablets commemorating historical events of this vicinity.

Roscoe Conklin Simmons of Chicago, who seconded President Hoover's nomination at the Chicago convention, was the principal speaker.

Events directly connected with the formation and activities of the Republican party were among the historical incidents to which the tablets, one of which was set aside for the one-room building where Giddings wrote the original G. O. P. plank, were dedicated.

Another honored the memory of Senator M. F. Wade, who as acting Vice President would have become President but for a single vote preventing impeachment of President Andrew Johnson. The first woman suffrage convention held here in 1844, the Anno Mundi station of the "underground railway" the elm tree under which President McKinley once spoke, and Senator Wade's old law office, were subjects for other tablet dedications.

ROOSEVELT TO SPEAK IN SALT LAKE THIS EVE

Democrat Candidate Will Discuss Railroad Situation

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 17—(AP)—Checking off the eighth of the states he has crossed on his presidential campaign to the west, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt left behind Wyoming with his cheering crowds and reached Salt Lake City where tonight he will advance proposals for relieving the nation's railroad situation.

Roosevelt arrived at Salt Lake City, one of the important railroad centers of the west, about midnight Friday. He will remain Saturday and Sunday. On Sunday night his special train will head north for the Pacific northwest.

Mr. Roosevelt's railroad speech will be delivered in the famous Mormon Tabernacle at 7:15 P. M. Mountain Standard Time. A double radio hookup has been arranged for the address. The speech, it is understood, will take up 45 minutes.

It is understood that the Democratic nominee, among other things will advocate a broadening of the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission, to include jurisdiction over bus, truck and airplane service.

Former Lee County Prisoner Jailed

The arrest of James Gregory of Aurora by Chief of Police J. D. Van Bibber in Ashton two weeks ago, is said to have resulted in the discovery of an automobile theft gang of some magnitude, which has been active in Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana for some weeks. Gregory was turned over to Sheriff James Mason of Elkhorn, Wis., and a few days later two companions, Jesse Black and Marvin Lewiston, also of Aurora, was taken in custody when they called on Gregory at the county jail in Elkhorn.

According to word received this morning the trio have been connected with an alleged automobile theft ring and are held at Elkhorn. Black was arrested by Chief Van Bibber May 27, 1928, at his drive into Dixon late at night with a sedan which had been stolen from the Savanna. According to reports the gang operated actively between Chicago, Wis., and Crown Point, Ind., and they are being held for investigation by federal authorities for transporting stolen cars from one state to another.

Gregory, who was arrested while attempting to dispose of a stolen car in Ashton, is said to have admitted to several other deals, which led to the arrest of Black and Lewis.

China's floods play havoc with farmers. Last year's flood affected a farm population equivalent to the entire farm population of United States. About 45 per cent of all buildings in the flood area were destroyed by water that averaged 9 feet deep.

THREE TAZEWELL CO. DEPUTIES INDICTED FOR MURDER OF MAN HELD PRISONER IN COUNTY JAIL

Pekin, Ill., Sept. 17—(AP)—Three Deputy Sheriffs were indicted by the Tazewell county grand jury today for manslaughter in the death of Martin Virant in his county jail cell. Virant's body was found hanging in the cell Sept. 1, but pathologists found that death was not due to strangulation.

Those indicted today were Deputy Sheriff C. O. Skinner, Ernest L. Fleming and Frank Lee. Virant had been in custody as a material witness to a brawl in which another man was killed.

VETERANS CIVIL WAR GATHERING IN SPRINGFIELD

Annual Encampment Boys In Blue Will Begin Tomorrow P. M.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 17—(AP)—Grand Army of the Republic leaders, here for the 66th annual national encampment, today paid homage to men who gave it birth.

Visits to the shrines of Lincoln were on informal itineraries, the official program of the encampment beginning tomorrow afternoon on the Oak Ridge cemetery slope on which stands the tomb of the Emancipator.

An unofficial visit was made today by officers of the federated patriotic societies to the grave of Dr. Benjamin Franklin Stephenson, organizer and first Provisional Commander of the Grand Army, at Petersburg, 30 miles northeast of Springfield.

Commander-in-Chief Samuel P. Town of Philadelphia remained at his hotel to rest and was represented at a flag raising ceremony. Assisting were Mrs. Annie Poole Atwood, Wolaster, Mass., president of the National Women's Relief Corps; Mrs. Harriet Goetz, Buffalo, N. Y., President of the Daughters of Union Veterans; and Mrs. Matie R. Tucker, National Treasurer of the Daughters of Union Veterans.

2,500 Expected
Every incoming train brought blue-clad veterans to Springfield and many came by auto. Full departments from California, Nevada, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont and New York were to arrive tonight.

Officers today revised estimates of attendance from 981 accredited delegates to about 640. They predicted, however, more than 2,500 veterans would stage a pilgrimage here in gesture of reverence to their Civil War Commander-in-Chief. The encampment is the first to be held in Springfield.

Over the streets that Lincoln walked the veterans will parade Wednesday morning. Many of them have spurred officers of motor cars from Springfield residents and announced they would march the six block route past the reviewing stand on the grounds of the Sangamon county courthouse. The route was shortened after officers objected to plans for a 16-block parade as too strenuous.

At Lincoln Tomb
Gov. Louis L. Emmerson will join the Grand Army tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock in the tribute to Lincoln at the cemetery, and in his first public appearance since illness overtook him five weeks ago, will welcome the "Boys in Blue" back "home" to Springfield and Illinois. The G. A. R. was organized in central Illinois by Dr. Stephenson in 1866 and the first post was established in Decatur.

A statue of Lincoln will be unveiled after the cemetery service on the lawn of the courthouse, which the Emancipator practiced law. The statue of Bedford granite and showing Lincoln in a sitting posture, book in hand, is a tribute from the Daughters of Union Veterans to their fathers. "In the hearts of the people for whom he saved the union," reads an inscription, "the memory of Abraham Lincoln is enshrined forever." Commander Town will participate in the dedication.

Young Republicans To Organize Here

A meeting called for the purpose of organizing a Lee county unit of the Young Republicans club, was in progress this afternoon in the circuit court room at the court house and was attended by a large number of young voters from throughout the county. A short session was held this morning at which time talks were given by County Judge William Leach and Attorney H. C. Warner. The organization was being perfected this afternoon. Park Livingston of Springfield, state chairman of the recently formed organization, presided at the meeting. Young men and women who have participated in both state and national elections were present at both sessions today. A county chairman will be selected at the afternoon business session and plans arranged for other meetings to be held in the near future.

NO PLANET FLIGHTS

Washington—It would be folly to follow the plans of Jules Verne and attempt a flight to distant planets in a projectile fired from a cannon. Dr. John Q. Stewart, of Princeton University believes. The acceleration of such a projectile would crush any person inside of it, he says.

BODY OF SUICIDE JEWELER'S WIFE FOUND IN CELLAR

Discovery Closes Case Plymouth, Mass. Officers Declare

Quincy, Mass., Sept. 17—(AP)—Charles E. DuBois, Tuckahoe, N. Y., jeweler, slipped a letter into the desk of his lawyer, Jeremiah J. MacAnaney, two hours before he committed suicide yesterday, MacAnaney disclosed today.

MacAnaney admitted the letter dealt with the predicament of DuBois, whose wife's body was found buried in the cellar of the DuBois summer home at Plymouth five hours after the suicide, but said it contained no admission of guilt that DuBois had slain his wife.

The lawyer said he would confer with an associate regarding the letter and, if it was determined the contents of the missive could be made public "without harming any one," he would make it public Monday.

STATE MILITIA AGAIN WANTED AT SIOUX CITY

Iowa Governor's Move For Peace Seems To Be Failure

Sioux City, Ia., Sept. 17—(AP)—Confronted with strengthened farm holiday picket lines Woodbury county authorities today were prepared to renew their request for state troops to clear nearby highways.

Meeting last night, Sioux City business men again instructed Sheriff John A. Davenport to ask Gov. Dan Turner to send state militia in an effort to break up the blockade against movement of farm produce.

His first request to the Governor refused, Davenport again declared the situation to be "far beyond control," pointing out that there were more pickets on the highway last night than there had been for some time.

In rejecting the first appeal, the Governor said negotiations were pending which he hoped would end the picketing which has been carried on in Woodbury county since the National Farmers Holiday Association began its campaign for higher farm prices more than a month ago.

The nature of the negotiations has not been disclosed today but further conferences between the Governor, Sheriff Davenport, and other Woodbury county and Sioux City officials were in prospect.

Meanwhile, the attempt to blockade the important Sioux City market had reached up into Minnesota, where at Worthington, not far from the Iowa line, pickets were reported preparing to begin activities next Monday, directing their attention to non-perishable products only.

PERPETUAL BACHELOR Has Lost His Title

Last night Mr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Martin of Greenwich, Conn., socially prominent, disclosed that Don and their daughter, Aileen, 21, were married in Greenwich Friday morning.

"Of course, we're married but we wanted to keep it secret," said the bride as she sat at a farewell dinner with her husband last night. A few hours later Don sailed on the Olympic. Mrs. Don will follow him next week and they will spend their honeymoon on Lake Como.

LEGION'S CENSURE OF WAR DEPT. UNWARRANTED; DISTRIBUTION OF HURLEY PAPER INDIVIDUAL'S ACT

Portland, Ore., Sept. 17—(AP)—Responsibility for placing Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley's statement on "Bonus Marchers in Washington" before American Legion delegates at their recent convention here, had been accepted today by Brig. General Joseph P. O'Neill, retired.

The convention had censured the War Department in a resolution, the impression being it was responsible for delivery as the statements were in envelopes bearing the War Department frank.

In an interview last night General O'Neill expressed chagrin his action had served as a boomerang against his friend, Secretary Hurley, and the Department.

He said the statements were mimeographed at his own expense, and a clerk had erroneously placed them in War Department envelopes instead of plain ones which were provided. They were not mailed.

The War Department didn't know a thing about the copies of that speech that were distributed to the delegates at the Legion convention," General O'Neill said. "Neither did Pat Hurley."

LEGAL TANGLE OVER P. BERN'S ESTATE LOOMS

Public Administration Executor Estate Of Miss Millette

Sacramento, Calif., Sept. 17—(AP)—The "presumption" that Dorothy Millette was legally the widow of Paul Bern, self slain film executive, despite his marriage to Jean Harlow, platinum-haired screen star, was the basis of a Public Administrator's petition on file here today to protect possible claimants to the Millette estate.

Public Administrator Herman Koch petitioned for letters of administration in Miss Millette's estate, explaining he did so to protect her relatives and to pave the way for a possible claim to a share in Bern's estate.

He added, however, he did not know whether any relatives survived the auburn-haired woman who was once known as "Mrs. Paul Bern" or whether she had any legitimate claim to Bern's estate.

Funeral services for Miss Millette, who leaped to her death from a Sacramento river steamer two days after Bern shot himself in Beverly Hills, Calif., were to be held here this afternoon. Coroner James R. Garlick prepared to inter her body in East Lawn cemetery, after receiving instructions from Mendel Silberberg, attorney for Miss Harlow. The attorney telegraphed "relatives of my office desire to see the body of Miss Millette properly cared for."

AMBOY, ASHTON TEAMS FEATURE SUNDAY GAMES

Local soft ball fans are watchfully waiting the outcome of Sunday afternoon's second lap in the county soft ball tournament, which is expected to bring together "Bill" Finch's Amboy Buffers and "Tuffy" Shaffer's Ashton Cubs in the third and feature game of the three contest series. These two teams battled to an eleven inning tie about six weeks ago on the Amboy fair grounds field, the game being called with the count standing 3 to 3. At that Rock River Valley picnic at Lowell Park, about three weeks ago, they met a second time and the Cubs took away the decision. The Amboy team was said to have been crippled by the absence of some of its star players who were unable to be present.

The managers of both teams are casting long glances upon the county championship title. The Buffers from Ashton will be a surprise to the Dixon fans as they have not been seen in action in the opening games of the tournament. Amboy is known to be a hard fighter having battled for an even dozen innings last Sunday to wrest the title from Wink's Specials by a 2 to 1 count. The Buffers will meet Franklin Grove in the first game of the series Sunday afternoon at the Dixon Municipal airport field. The East End Indians will meet the Dixon All Stars in the second game and the final will see Argonne battling the winner of the opening battle. The winners in this set of games will clash one week later to decide first, second and third places in the tournament. The three games tomorrow afternoon are expected to attract a large crowd from all of the towns represented in the tournament.

Watch Baby During Changing Season

September is a month of sudden and extreme changes in temperature. But the hot spell last week did not live up to true September style. The night did not cool off as anticipated and most of the country sweated day and night for six or eight days. It was hard to tell what to do with babies. Each mother, as she put the baby to bed thought something like this: “Last night and the night before were hot, but the paper says cooler—besides there are a few clouds in the sky and some wind. I'd better make sure and put a shirt and nightgown on Baby and fasten down his blanket so she can't kick it off. After all, it's September.”

After several nights of this with the thermometer staying up around 80 degrees until sunrise, when it jumped to the century mark these careful mothers were surprised to see prickly heat break out on their children.

The Unexpected Happens
Prickly heat in September? When there hadn't been a sign of it during June, July or August? Which goes to show that not only in September but at any other time of the year, the unexpected is likely to happen. You cannot count on the weather and you can not make any rule for dressing the baby or fixing him up for the night, just because it is such and such a month.

What is good for one month, one week, or even for a day, will not be the best thing for the next in many cases.

The best thing to go by is instinct. No, not just anybody's instinct, but the mother's own. She herself, with a little solemn thought on the subject will be able to tell what to put on the baby both day and night.

Keep On the Alert
But now that the hot spell seems to have passed into limbo, it would probably not be safe to repeat that performance again. Because as fall advances there is a teasing dampness to night air, little bursts of wind, a chilling coolness toward morning that is quite dangerous to a tender little unprotected body. The safe rule is when the baby is put to bed in the heat at six to make him as comfortable as the temperature permits at the time.

At nine o'clock in and look things over in the nursery. Add covers if necessary. Put down one window and another up if the wind has changed. And at twelve, play policeman again, to adjust covers and clothing as seems best.

The whole story amounts to this: In the fall you cannot put a baby to bed and say, “See you in the morning, darling.” With quick changes from hot to cold and back again, alternate damp and dry nights, turns of nights and still ones, it is safer to check up on a baby's safety and comfort every few hours except perhaps those from midnight to six. And even then it won't hurt to take a peep if you are awake.

Frock For The Deb's 'Coming Out' Party

Frock from Bonwit Teller

Shoulders grow wide and waists grow more slender when the autumn party frocks appear on the ballroom floor. Material isn't relying on added ornamentation so much this season. It is making the most of itself by tying startling bows and letting the full skirts flair lavishly.

The girl in the sketch knows that she is taking the right steps because she chose a transparent velvet gown in bacaret green, which features the epaulet shoulders, demure yet sophisticated, and ties a big bow at the center of the back. The frock is form-fitting, molding the body until it reaches a point just above the knees when it decides to sweep out, in a wider gesture.

The gown is youthful enough for any debutante, yet it possesses a sense of wisdom planned to make the stag line wonder if the wearer has really just “come out.”

Fifty-first Anniversary Harmon Church An Enjoyable Affair

On Sunday, Sept. 11, the Harmon M. E. church celebrated its fifty-first anniversary by gathering in as many as possible of its former members and friends.

Sunday school convened as usual at 10 o'clock but it was a much interrupted session. Friends and guests arrived by ones and twos and threes and must needs be greeted. Down stairs the refreshment committee was kept busy with overflowing baskets from which emanated the most delectable odors.

The morning service opened at 11 o'clock. A solo was rendered by Mrs. W. C. Hill, now of Stockton, Ill. It was a delight to hear her voice in song once more. A vocal number was given by a group of our young people: Ione Eddy, Mary Whitmore, Lenore Schwab, Goble Wadsworth and Kenneth Edson.

Reverend Charles Parsons, whose parents were among the pioneers in this vicinity, preached the morning sermon. Mr. Parsons belongs to a family of ten children. Of these two are lawyers, three are preachers, three are farmers, one of whom has served in the Iowa state legislature, one a home missionary and one a housewife who has sent a son as missionary to the foreign field. Mr. Parsons is superintendent of The Society for the Friendless in Des Moines, Iowa.

Shortly after noon dinner was served. Following dinner, the afternoon service. The opening prayer was offered by Mrs. Clara Shawyer of Dixon. Mrs. Marion Porter Poik of Quincy, Illinois, then spoke, bringing a helpful gospel message. She also sang with the auto-harp accompaniment.

Opportunity was given for recalling the early days of the church and community and letters were read from the persons whose names follow: Rev. J. E. M. Chambers, Rev. J. B. Kenna, Rev. W. H. Tuttle, Rev. L. P. Warrington, Rev. A. W. Hetrick, Mrs. S. Perkins, Mrs. Roa Smith and Miss

Popular Young Couples Principals In Double Wedding

Two popular young couples of Dixon were united in marriage on Thursday afternoon at five o'clock at the Christian parsonage by Rev. James A. Barnett. An impressive ceremony was used, the two couples taking their vows simultaneously. Miss Helen M. Sanders, becoming the bride of Kenneth E. Bovey and Miss Olive Welch becoming the bride of Frank E. Sleasman. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the near relatives, M. and Mrs. Ross Bovey, parents of Kenneth and Mr. and Mrs. Erick Welch, parents of Miss Welch and Dick Welch, brother of the bride, and his wife.

Both brides were prettily attired in blue and carried rosebuds. After the ceremony the bridal couples and relatives were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Bovey where a delicious wedding dinner was served. There were fourteen in attendance. The tables were attractively decorated in garden flowers in the colorful autumn shades.

After dinner Mr. and Mrs. Bovey and Mrs. and Mrs. Sleasman left on a wedding trip, both brides, who are intimate friends, wearing suits in the new beet root shade. On the return from the wedding trip the couples will make their homes in Dixon. All four young people are popular and highly esteemed in a large circle of friends, all of whom hasten to extend their best wishes for future happiness. The two couples will visit Niagara Falls and Chicago.

Paris Offers Winter Dinner Gown That Covers Arms, Reveals Ankles

By DIANA MERWIN
Paris —(AP)— A new sleeved dinner gown—willowy and worldly—has made its debut with the winter fashions of 1932. While arms are covered, however, ankles often are revealed, and slit skirts slashed in six or eight places are sometimes part of the design. Hemlines vary from floor-length to five inches from the floor, waistlines are slender, and the simplicity of the silhouette is more sophisticated than the most elaborately trimmed frock.

The sleeves in these new evening models vary widely in design. Sometimes they are elbow length puffed affairs, again they are only abbreviated capes. Their general effect, however, is to offer contrast to the décollete of the evening mode.

Velvets are among the favorite fabrics for the new dinner frocks. A violet velvet gown is designed with a draped shoulder line, elbow-length puffed sleeves and a back décollete slashed twice to the waist, while a blue and black stripe velvet is fashioned on the princess silhouette with a broadened shoulder line.

Lace and pebbled crepes have stepped into the limelight, too. One designer offers a black crepe (waxed) lace with a yoke and upper sleeves of shell pink chiffon topped by a little black lace bolero as the essence of sophistication in dinner wear, while another shows a henna toned pebbled crepe, the slender silhouette of which is topped by a brief matching jacket with elbow length puffed sleeves.

For the woman who wants something different there are scores of interesting designs. A geranium tinted crepe concentrates its interest on swooping bishop sleeves, a black chiffon is finished with short sleeves edged in black coq feathers, while a turquoise artificial silk has a black decollete laced with dark brown velvet.

LANVIN's pointed sleeve is a real fashion pointer. A red woolen coat has this sleeve with a banding of grey squirrel to match the huge collar.

Women who rate over 90 per cent intellectually marry much less frequently than women whose intellectual rating is lower, she also has discovered.

A CANDIDATE'S PENALTY.

Anyone who takes the time to sit down and muse a bit about our presidential campaigners must sometimes wonder if perhaps the Socialist, Norman Thomas, isn't in the most enjoyable spot of all.

To be sure, Mr. Thomas hasn't the remotest chance of being elected. But that, after all, is just what makes his spot enjoyable. He gets all of the excitement of campaigning for the presidency without any of the grief.

All of which, of course, is just another way of saying that a presidential campaign, for a candidate in either of the two major parties, must be one of the most terrific strains ever put upon any man.

This isn't necessarily because of the sheer physical activity involved—although, as in the case of Bryan in 1896, that in itself may be appalling. It is the mental strain, the sense of being a participant in the most stupendous gamble any American citizen can enter, the constant knowledge that every word, every act, every smile, almost, must be scrutinized in advance for its possible effect.

The presidential candidate can never be himself. He can never consult his own wishes exclusively. He can never for a moment forget that he is a contestant in a race.

And the worst thing of all must be the thought of the prize that lies just ahead of him. The presidency is the greatest prize any American can win. It ensures one a kind of immortality—a place in the history books as long as the republic lasts. The most self-contained of candidates must now and then get a fluttering of the heart when he dares to ponder on it.

It is this sort of thing, one suspects, even more than the ceaseless round of speeches, interviews, handshakes and all the rest, that leaves a candidate, at the end of a presidential campaign, in need of a quiet month in the mountains. And the fortunate Mr. Thomas, who knows he can't possibly win, is spared all of it! There must be moments when Messrs. Hoover and Roosevelt envy him just a little.

STORY TELLERS AND FAIRIES.

A long-lost race of pigmy cave men who lived in Europe and the British Isles during the old stone age probably gave rise to the myths about fairies, according to a recent speaker before the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

This race, submerged when more advanced people entered the land, lived in caves, disliked their more civilized neighbors and flitted about on the dusky outskirts of things, aloof and wary, until finally they died out entirely. Legends about them were handed down, from mouth to mouth, over countless centuries, until finally men forgot that they were telling about an actual race of people and embroidered the tales into fantastic accounts of diminutive supernatural beings of enchanting loveliness.

So, at any rate, runs the British scientists' explanation; and it is a striking and interesting example of the way in which the race can take a tiny bit of fact and expand it into a myth which bears almost no relation to its original form.

Story tellers, you see, are a queer lot. The way things actually happen is seldom quite good enough for them. They put in little things here and there to make the tale more pleasing, they change their stories of what really happened into stories of what they wish had happened—and presently the race has a new legend, brave and shining, very often, fit to ensnare the dreams of wide-eyed youth for unending centuries.

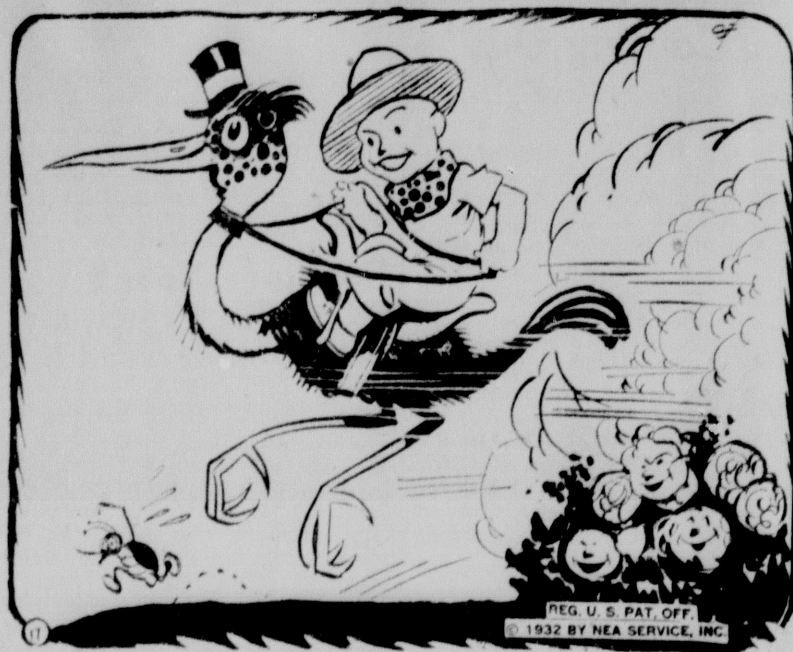

So the whispered reminiscences of pigmy cave men become transmuted into delicate and charming stories of lovely beings from the realms of magic. So a blind poet's chant about an ancient war becomes a great epic of heroism and human struggle. So a fireside recounting of a half-savage king's exploits becomes the deathless story of King Arthur, his round table and the island vale of Avalon.

And so, over the years, humanity builds for itself tales that inspire it and comfort it, tales that persuade it that it has a noble heritage and a high destiny, tales that round off the rough edges of the world and make life more livable. It doesn't matter much how these tales begin. The artistry of the story teller can make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.

The progress of industrial maintenance has been interrupted to such a degree that today more than 50 per cent of the machinery, equipment and plant facilities in American factories is obsolete.—A. W. Robertson, Pittsburgh executive.

I have demonstrated what I set out to prove, that is, the superiority of British airplane manufacturers.—Captain James A. Mollison, trans-Atlantic flyer.

I saw no abject poverty in any of the great centers of population.—Secretary of Interior Wilbur, upon return from trip to Pacific Coast.

The bird that nipped poor Duncy's nose and tried to rip his suit of clothes flew high when Scouty chased it, and then perched up in a tree.

Wee Duncy rubbed his nose and said, "I thought that I would lose my head. I wonder why that crazy bird was trying to injure me."

The zoo man said, "I told you, son, that it would not be any fun to let that bird out of the cage. In fact, it was absurd."

"It always wants to start a fight and give all little folks a fright. It bites at noses. That is why it's called a biter bird."

"But, let's forget that scamp right now. Just come with me. I'll show you how the clumsy-clown flies upside-down. 'Twill make you Times roar."

The funny bird was then turned loose and when it put its wings to use, it turned right over on its back. My, how the bird could soar.

It wasn't very long until the zoo man's whistle, loud and shrill, rang out and then the clumsy-clown swooped down right by the bunch. The zoo man stroked its funny head. "Your flying stunt was fine," he said. "I'll pay you well by giving you some extra food for lunch."

Soon through the trees a bird was spied that Scouty thought he'd like to ride. He asked the zoo man if he could. The man replied, "You bet. That bird I call the jumpyjump. Your ride will be bump after bump, but if you want to try it, on its back I'll help you get."

A smile spread on wee Scouty's face as he was helped up into place. "Hang on," exclaimed the zoo man. "I will turn the strange bird free."

Then Scouty felt a sudden thump. The bird would fly and then 'twould jump, but Scouty was real game. He cried, "Say! This is fun for me!" (Copyright 1932, NEA Service, Inc.)

They carry on to serve you pies. It seems, to them belong the cheers.

POET'S CORNER

WAITRESS THREE

A very pretty sight to see,
Is where you'll find the waitress three.
They're always hustling at work
And not a task they ever shirk.
From week beginning till its close,
They're tripping on their nimble toes.

It's nice to see them move about,
Without a sound, and neer a shout.
Somehow, they grant an atmosphere
That permeates with welcome cheer.
Within the large, inviting room,
There never is a place for gloom.

So here these comely maidens strive
To help make Andy's business thrive.
To help make Andy's business thrive.
To help make Andy's business thrive.

I don't believe he'd half succeed
Were they not helping him, indeed.
Three petals of a clever leaf—
Take one away and life is brief.

Each day things seem to be all right,
Because they're full of vim, and bright.
I never saw a wrinkled brow—
I don't believe that they know how.

But happy throughout all the day,
How would you like to be that way?

They're courteous and kind to you,
They never watch just how you chew.
Their efforts all for you begin,
To satiate the pangs within.

And so, for this they get the prize,
They know you're hungry by your eyes.

Before I close this little rhyme,
I think it's proper and it's time
To tell the names of the famed three—
They're Bessie, Cora and Phoebe.

You'll always find them working where
There is a matchless bill of fare.

So why not give to them the praise
They earn in these depression days?
You stroll beneath the smiling skies.

DAILY HEALTH

THE EXPECTANT MOTHER

It is now little more than 30 years since medicine instituted the routine supervision of the expectant mother.

Experience has taught us that while pregnancy is what might be considered a normal physiologic process, careful medical supervision for the nine months before the child's birth is in the interest of the mother's health and that of the child as well.

Prenatal care achieves several results. It assists the woman in making an adequate mental adjustment to her experience. Pre-natal care offers an opportunity for the satisfactory treatment of complications and of certain diseases which, if suffered by the mother, might make pregnancy a dangerous trial to her and the unborn child.

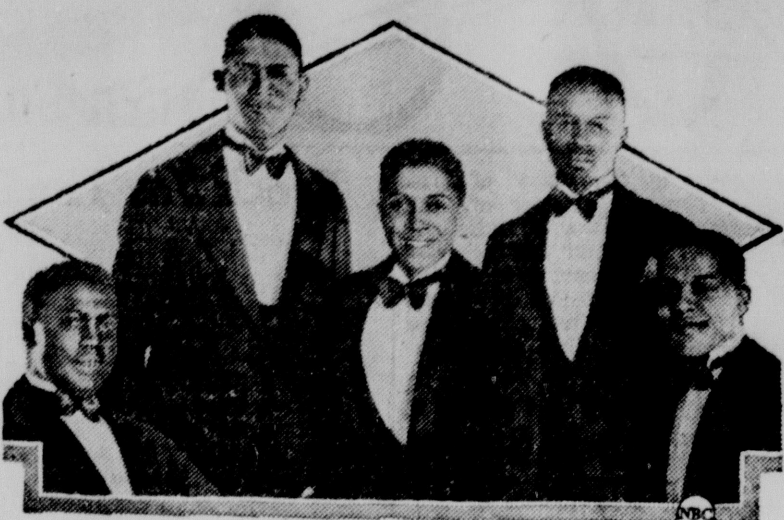

Unfortunately, the progress we have made since pre-natal care was instituted has not been equal along all the lines mentioned. There are still some accidents associated with child birth which tax the resources of the medical profession. Such accidents are those of hemorrhage, shock and infection.

Specialists who have devoted considerable study to the problem of making motherhood as safe as possible, complain of the impatience which certain women show during delivery. This impatience tends to increase the number of instrumental deliveries, which in turn subject the woman to avoidable hazards.

Cesarean operations, by which the unborn child is surgically delivered through an opening in the abdominal wall, rather than in the normal way, are also on the increase.

While at times this method of delivery, as well as delivery by instrumentation, is unavoidable, its wider and sometimes unwarranted application undoubtedly accounts in part, at least, for the still rela-

NEGRO SINGERS HERE TOMORROW

UTICA JUBILEE SINGERS

Who will give a sacred concert in the First Methodist church in this city tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock. Dr. Stansell, the pastor, will conduct the worship and present this very remarkable quintet of Negro voices. This organization is "something altogether different and delightful, unique and inspiring."

Miriam Foster Welch, the only child of Stephen Foster, the famous composer, has said of these songs: "They sing my father's songs with more feeling and beauty than I have ever heard them."

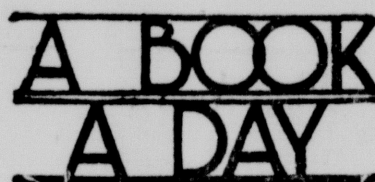

The Utica singers have twice been to Europe, once in 1927 and again in 1930, giving concerts in London, Paris, Berlin, Milan, Barcelona, Brussels, Amsterdam, Warsaw, Prague, Stockholm and Oslo. In Belgrade they sang to the royal family. While in Europe last they broadcast over twelve stations.

In this country they may frequently be heard over the NBC network. They record exclusively for Victor Co. and twice they have been selected by the New York Telegram for its "All American Broadcast" as the country's foremost Negro spiritual singers.

Many of the older spirituals were born in slavery and the burden of their song is looking forward to deliverance, if not in this world, then in the next. The patience, forgiving forbearance, and altogether admirable quality of being able to sing and laugh in the face of trouble is seen in these racial songs.

THIS BIOGRAPHY ASSAULTS CRITICS OF MARK TWAIN

In "Mark Twain's America," Bernard DeVoto takes the popular critical theory that Mark Twain was a born artist thwarted and defeated by his environment and does his level best to shoot it full of holes. And, you want, my opinion, he succeeds admirably.

This theory, voiced most effectively a dozen years ago by Van Wyck Brooks, has it that Mark Twain was meant to be a great satirist crying out against the evils of his time but that the cramping force of a frontier environment and the restrictive influences of the genteel tradition compelled him to become, instead, a mere humorist striving for riches.

Mr. DeVoto looks the theory in the eye, says "Oh, yeah?" and goes forth to battle.

To begin with he remarks that Mark Twain apparently wanted to be a "mere humorist" right from the beginning. He also remarks as dead an environment for an artist as literary folk who have never seen it suppose Mark Twain, he says, realized himself completely in the two finest novels ever written in America—"Huckleberry Finn" and "Tom Sawyer."

Incidentally, Mr. DeVoto has written a very beautiful description of frontier life and frontier people. The breath of the old west is in his blood and it is a genuine distinguished piece of work.

Sidelights In
News In Capital
Of United States

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington.—Habitués of the galleries of congress who thrilled at the idea that perhaps Gene Tunney would come down from Connecticut some day to sit in the senate may have as great a treat in store after next March 4.

For advance reports reaching Washington indicated that Connecticut republicans had hit upon one Mr. Thomas Albert Dwight Jones as the man they hope to place in Col. Johnny Tilson's seat in the house.

This Mr. Jones is "Tad" Jones, Yale's famous football and baseball star as an undergraduate and more recently head coach of Eli's gridiron teams. Of course, before Jones enters the house, he must beat his democratic opponent in November.

Athlete-Politicians

Jones will not be the first man to enter the field of national politics by way of the athletic route. If he should enter the house, he would have as a colleague a South Carolinian whose proud boast is that his ability as a baseball player sent him—or at least had a lot to do with sending him to congress.

Tommy McMillan was once a star on the Charleston club of the First league.

Tad would find plenty of company among his colleagues in the house. Many of the representatives won fame in their younger days as athletes. Fred Purnell of Indiana, a republican leader of the house, was a champion pole vaulter at the University of Indiana. Hamilton Fish of New York, a Harvard football star, was captain of the team

G. A. R. Faces Last March On Visit to Lincoln's Tomb

Led by the commander-in-chief, Samuel P. Town, top, the Grand Army of the Republic will visit Abraham Lincoln's tomb, above, and then pay tribute to Major Benjamin F. Stephenson, below, who founded the organization.

By NEA Service
Springfield, Ill.—Sixty-seven years after the last shot was fired in the war between the states, the thin blue line of surviving members of the Grand Army of the Republic will gather in Springfield soon to pay its last tribute to Abraham Lincoln, war president and commander-in-chief.

These heroes of yesterday, now grayed and bent with age, will conduct impressive ceremonies at Lincoln's tomb in Oak Ridge Cemetery as the feature event of the opening day of the annual encampment of the G. A. R. here Sept. 18 to 23. This may not be their last encampment—for the veterans insist they will hold encampments as long as they are able to travel—but probably it will be their farewell visit to Lincoln's grave, since it is very unlikely that Springfield will ever be the scene of another of their meetings.

For six days the old comrades of a bygone war will hold forth in Springfield, visiting the scenes that Lincoln knew and loved so well.

Among principal speakers on their program will be Commander-in-Chief Samuel P. Town of Philadelphia, and Governor Louis L. Eng-

On Friday, the final day of the encampment, the veterans will be taken to the tomb of Major Benjamin F. Stephenson, founder of the G. A. R., who is buried about 35 miles from Springfield. A memorial service will be held at the cemetery. It was Major Stephenson, a former surgeon in the 14th Illinois infantry, who founded the G. A. R. by establishing the first post at Decatur, Ill., on April 6, 1866. Soon a second post was established in Springfield and in November of that year the first national encampment was held at Indianapolis.

Though the old veterans are in no mood to quit, many believe that this year's encampment may be the last, for the thin blue line is fading fast for one year, and is an old grid foe of Tad's.

Bankhead of Alabama was a star fullback at Bama when he was in college. Dick Kleberg of Texas won note as a pitcher at the University of Texas and turned down the offer of a big league contract.

Bachman An Athlete

Carl Bachman of West Virginia, the republican whip, was an all-around athlete at the University of West Virginia. Lou Douglas, youthful representative from Arizona, was a baseball star at Amherst.

Fred Vinson of Kentucky still is remembered at Centre College for his ability to play baseball. The lanky Elzey of Mississippi was a diamond star at the University of Mississippi.

Fred Britten of Illinois once was an amateur boxer of note. And over in the senate, Barbour of New Jersey once was hailed as a potential heavyweight champion boxer.

G. O. P. Victory In Missouri Predicted

Chicago, Sept. 16—(AP)—Dr. E. B. Clements, Republican National Committeeman from Missouri, told campaign leaders here today that "Republican victory in Missouri is in sight for the November elections."

"For the past three presidential election years, the Democratic party in Missouri claimed victory all through August, September and October," Clements said. "But each year the people of Missouri have elected Republicans and given their electoral vote to the Republican ticket."

"The trend is noticeable, and with the kind of campaign we are making victory is in sight again," Clements was accompanied by Arthur Curtis, Republican State Chairman of Missouri, who predicted victory for state candidates.

A New Era
of Banking Co-operation

The strength of the United States banking system today rests upon the shoulders of the thousands of able, honest bankers whose faithfulness to their public trust has been demonstrated beyond question.

The record of loyal service by bankers shows few exceptions. Banking standards of management have been raised to a new high level as a result of the experiences of the past two and one-half years.

New legislation, stricter supervision and a deeper appreciation of mutual interests, give promise of a new era in the relations of banks and their depositors.

WHAT'S THE USE OF PLAYING BIG SERIES ASKS LOU

Gehrig Forecasts Brutal Slaughter Of Cubs In Four Games

By PAUL MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
Chicago, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Take it from Lou Gehrig, there'll be a flock of "forgotten men" when the big Yankees gush move up for the 1932 world series barrage.

"They'll be Cub pitchers, and we'll scatter them in just four straight games," he predicts with nothing but contempt for the opposition.

You can't blame the big Yankee first baseman for his contempt and bluster. He's been to three world series battles and has been one of the big cogs in the powerful Yankee machine that ground out four straight victories in the last two against Pittsburgh and St. Louis. Furthermore, his big war club crashed out an average of .383 in 15 world series engagements.

"I don't see how the Cubs can expect to stop us, especially since the Babe is a cinch to get in even if he has to walk up to the plate on crutches," Lou chuckled as he swung his big bat around the plate cage at Comiskey Park. "And four straight games would be great thing for the game. You and I know that there are a lot of sour apple guys walking around and predicting that this series is going the full limit of seven games because of the depression. Well, if we can win it in four games, even if they will have to stop their broadcasts."

ANOTHER VIEW
By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer
With all the talk of the Yankees' wrecking crew and what they are likely to do to the Chicago Cubs' pitching in the approaching world series, it might be timely to point out that the Cubs boast a pretty fair game breaker-upper of their own in big Cubby Hartnett.

If the Chicagoans win in the National League, which they will, barring a major catastrophe, the Yank curvers will do well to work on Hartnett very carefully. He is hitting like a ton of brick for Manager Charles Grimm, specializing in home runs where they will do the most good.

Hartnett's smash over the right field fence in the third inning, his fifth in eight games, started the Cubs on the way to their 3 to 2 victory over the Phillies yesterday.

Cubs Gained Friday
As all the other National League teams were idle, the victory planted the Cubs a full six games ahead of the second place Pittsburgh Pirates, with only nine to go. They now need to win only five more, even if the Pirates capture all of their remaining 11, to pick up the marbles.

Bud Tinning, who took Burleigh Grimes' place as one of the Cubs' starting pitchers, went the route yesterday, keeping nine Philie hits well spaced. Ed Holley also pitched well for the Phils, yielding seven hits, but an error by Chuck Klein cost him a run.

Appearing in Chicago for the last time before they go back to tackle the Cubs in the big series, the Yankees scored a 4 to 1 win over the White Sox. Wilcy Moore and Dan MacFayden allowed the Sox only five hits, while the American League champions jumped on Sam Jones for five hits and three runs to sew it up in the third inning.

Grove Wins Close One
At Simmons' 33rd home run of the year with Cochran on base helped Lefty Grove of the Athletics take a close decision from Irving (Bump) Hadley of St. Louis, 3 to 2. The A's made only six hits off Hadley. Oscar Melillo knocked in both Brown runs.

Ivy Paul Andrews, who missed being in the world series money when the Yankees traded him, helped the MacFayden deal, pitched the Red Sox to a closing 5 to 2 triumph over Cleveland.

BY WILLIAM BRAUCHER
The Pitt Panther has been sharpening its claws in the woods near Windber, Pa., in preparation for what appears to be the hardest schedule a major university team ever attempted.

The 60 stalwarts upon whom Doctor Jock Sutherland bases his hopes for victory over Notre Dame, Stanford, Ohio State, Army, Penn. Carnegie Tech and others have lived outdoor life for two weeks in the rugged hills 20 miles from Johnstown.

Work and Sleep
To reach the camp a visitor must take a dirt road through the wilderness. Farmers tell you it is "a couple of miles down the hole." During the summer an engineering school is held there. The camp, consisting of a row of wooden shacks and a mess hall, is turned over to the football heroes for two weeks.

It should be an excellent engineering camp, because a man almost had to have a theodolite to find it.

The young men who will battle in ten hard games that take them all the way from Morgantown, W. Va., to Lincoln, Neb., emerge from the woods at 7:30 o'clock in the morning. They are back under their awls each night, meanwhile having packed in about 14 hours of climbing hills, scrambling and pecking in the food at intervals.

Call of the Wild
The camp is for men only. Probably the only danger John's football players are up against at Windber is an occasional bear. The woods are wild, and Sutherland hopes his young Panthers catch some of that spirit, because he needs wild men to carry out a schedule that the coaches view with alarm.

Stagg To Uncover A New Complicated Shift For His Squad

By WILLIAM WEEKES
Associated Press Sports Writer
Chicago, Sept. 17.—(AP)—A. A. Stagg's latest contribution to the game of football, the whirlwind shift, with which he expects to win back some of the University of Chicago's departed gridiron glory this season, was due for a semi-formal unveiling today.

With only two days of practice Stagg ordered out his squad for a regulation game, to learn without delay, how well his most promising talent since 1924, has gotten the hang of the maneuver.

The whirlwind replaces the flanker offensive of 1930 and 1931. Even though it is more complicated, Stagg in confident his current squad can handle it.

Northwestern also is wasting no time. Coach Dick Hanley had a game with the freshmen on the schedule for today. With Missouri coming to Evanston a week from today, things must be accomplished in a hurry.

Michigan also faces a mean proposition in Michigan State next week, but Coach Harry Kipke decided to put off scrimmage until Monday. Kipke also decided that his Wolverines would practice in privacy, at least until after the Michigan State encounter.

The coach was born in Scotland, by the way, and did not reach America until he was 18 years old. He is tall, slender and with a determined jaw. He looks like a football coach, and the players tell you he is one. The man is rugged, like the rocky hills around Windber.

Baseball has been Grimm's bread and meat since he was a lad of 17. At that age he played his first game with Connie Mack's cellar champions and, since then, according to some baseball authorities, he has looked like a German pop over developed into one of the smoothest first basemen since the incomparable Hal Chase.

Charley was raised in St. Louis. He washed bottles in the brewery where his father worked, read gas meters, and on afternoons, hung around Sportsman's Park to shag flies and sell peanuts.

Connie Mack saw him one day cavorting around the infield, picking up what chances came his way. Mack, desperately clutching at anything that looked like a player, asked Grimm if he'd like to try at big league baseball. Sure he would!

Mack sent him to Durham, S. C., in 1917. He went up with the Cards and, in 1918, found himself playing with Little Rock, Ark. He finished the year playing with Pittsburgh.

Charley covered first base for the Pirates about six years, and was traded to the Cubs in 1925 in a deal that involved six players. Grimm, since played about two different musical instruments and is an accomplished artist.

EARL COMBS
If the percentage of illiteracy in Kentucky has been lower than usual these last 10 years it probably can be blamed on Earl Combs. The swift-footed leadoff batter and centerfielder for the Yankees gave up a good schooling in job, paying $37 a month to become a professional ballplayer.

Thirteen years ago, Earl walked a total of eight miles to and from the little school where he conducted his classes in the three R's. Almost by accident, the Winchester, Ky., semi-pro team hired him to play shortstop on a promise of $10 a game for the season. That created Earl's first misgiving about school-teaching as a career.

When a coal company at High Splint offered him $150 a month for playing baseball and carpentering a little on the side, he knew the life of a pedagogue was not for him. From that time forward it was a series of quick steps into the majors.

Combs and Win Ballou, who once pitched for the Senators and the Browns and now is performing in the Coast League, were members of the same Harlan, Ky., independent team. Cap. Neal, business manager of the Louisville Coloreds on a personal scouting trip, offered each a contract. Ballou asked for a $1000 bonus to sign. Combs asked for pen and ink.

His 344 batting average with the Colonels in 1922 and 380 in 1923 was enough to convince Yankee owners here was a star. They laid $50,000 on the line and Combs packed up for New York.

He broke his leg sliding into the plate in 1924, but that only postponed his starring activities one year. From 1925 to the present time he has clicked. He has a major league batting average of .331, a world series average of .341 and has averaged 12 stolen bases a year since 1925.

There isn't a more pleasant smile in the big leagues than Combs'.

The visible cloud that we see escaping from a tea-kettle is not steam. This cloud has ceased to be steam and has condensed into tiny droplets of water. Real steam is invisible and is extremely hot. A small stream of it escaping from a boiler capable of producing high pressures will light a cigarette as readily as it can be done with a match. Tea-kettle "steam" has just the opposite effect. It puts out flames instead of starting them.

Political Highlights of Week Over the Nation

BY BYRON PRICE

Washington, Sept. 17.—(AP)—A new urge of activity, presaging a whirlwind finish after weeks of half-motion, has been put into the presidential campaign by the Maine election, the Roosevelt western swing, and renewed discussion of the bonus.

So far as the political generals themselves are concerned, it appears certain that the efforts to be exerted on public opinion from now on will be on a scale as great as the country has seen in any recent campaign.

For the expected redoubting of party endeavor on both sides the Maine election returns are largely responsible. Rejoicing Democrats, thinking that in their Maine victory they sense a distinct advantage everywhere, are encouraged to press every opportunity to the utmost. Surprised Republicans have been called upon by President Hoover himself to rally for a "hard fight."

Word has come to party leaders from many sections that a large body of the people are silent and apathetic. In general, neither campaign contributions nor attendance at political meetings shows an average high enough to indicate intense popular interest. Yet in Maine the vote was very heavy, which may mean that the public is thinking and meaning to act, even if it is not talking.

For the moment, most of the outward activity is on the part of the Democrats. Governor Roosevelt, speeding toward the west coast, is asking for the support of the voters of both parties, as he turns from the old subjects of the general depression and prohibition to speak about farm relief, power and the railroads. It is the aim of the Democrats to consolidate now if possible, enough western strength to win regardless of what the east may do.

The preparations of the Republicans for an inland October drive in both east and west will bring into action every available party wheeler. President Hoover's telegram to Chairman Sanders after the Maine election, asking for renewed effort everywhere, has been followed by a long string of political conferences at the White House. The President's own speaking program, calling heretofore for three major speeches, may be somewhat—but not greatly—expanded.

Whatever the political effect, publication of the bonus eviction report on the eve of the American Legion convention at Portland, stirred up a commotion which did not lack for public attention even in a week of commotions.

After giving Secretary Hurley both boos and cheers, the Legion endorsed the bonus; left aside a resolution to censure the President for evicting the bonus marchers from Washington; but adopted one censuring the War Department for distributing literature on the subject in the convention.

Much more probably will be heard of this before the campaign ends. President Hoover's opposition to the bonus is well known, and was reiterated during the Portland convention while Governor Roosevelt came under fire for urging, from several sources to declare himself. In one way or another the issue is sure to be kept alive, although the politicians do not agree how many votes will be influenced by it in the end.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

STAN BALL, an agent for cattle interests, faces ASPER DUDLEY in his office in the city. Asper is accused by the cattle men of interfering on their range with his timber cutting. Ball accuses Delo of crooked work at his Three Rivers camp. He accuses Delo of having men shot who try to check up on him. Ball says he is going to make a check himself. Hele reverts that he will personally see that Ball does not.

Standing before the office building, Stan Ball sees kidnapers allop a girl into a car. He catches the car and saves DONA DELO, Asper's daughter. When he learns who she is he slips away after telling her he is STANLEY BLACK.

DUDLEY WINTERS, in love with Dona, agrees to get Asper delo back on his wild trip to Three Rivers if she will marry him. She gives him some encouragement.

Dona goes with Dudley. They stop at SETH DOBY'S place. Doby refuses to help. Dona says Asper has been there and that he was ready for a killing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IV

DUDLEY had been reconnoitering and had found out all about Seth Doby's hotel and the attached scattering of houses and log cabins. He returned to Dona who was sitting on the worn steps looking out into the white moonlight. Dud had discovered one thing that elated him because it fitted the plan he had in mind.

"I have sallied forth and return with news," he greeted Dona.

"What news?"

"It is a short 20 miles from the spot where you sit to Three Rivers," Dudley paused accusingly.

"The rest of the way is mountain road. You don't know log roads so you won't understand until tomorrow."

"It would have been wonderful by moonlight," he urged.

"I was tired and I didn't want to tackle Dad till I was rested," Dona refused to tell the real reason why she had put up with Seth Doby.

The truth was she had expected help from the old rancher, help that he had politely refused.

Dudley figured he had made a point and hurried on. "There are hundreds of horses by actual count and six mud huts."

"Doby" you mean."

"Six 'doby' huts," Dudley corrected himself, "two log cabins and a house where a parson lives."

Dona laughed softly. "You mean Sam Dean. He is a sort of evangelist of the plains."

"Well, anyway he marries all the folks who are married out here," Dudley persisted.

"Did you find Seth Doby's garden?" Dona asked.

"My mouth was open to ask you to stroll there with me right now," Dudley caught her arm.

They walked through the sand down past the corrals and came to a grove of cottonwoods. Seth Doby had reclaimed a bit of the dry land from the foothills and had watered it. Under the trees there was green grass and flowers. Shrubs grew in dense clumps and gave off fragrance that made Dona's heart quiver.

Mountain laurel, red willow, black birch and a host of her old friends were there to greet her.

"I think I shall stay this time," she said with a sigh as she sat down cross-legged on the grass.

DUDLEY sprawled at her feet and propped his chin on his elbow.

The Funnist Sayings of ABE MARTIN As Selected by George Ade

Germany Ordered New "Pocket Ship"

Berlin, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The Admiralty today ordered the keel to be laid October 1 for Germany's third "pocket battleship" to be known for the present as "Armored Ship C."

The order followed closely the dispatch of a letter yesterday to Arthur Henderson, president of the world disarmament conference at Geneva, which was unofficially reported to contain notice that Germany would sit in the disarmament deliberations no longer unless her claims for arms equality were recognized.

The new battleship was budgeted during the regime of former Chancellor Heinrich Brüning as part of the government's program "for replacing obsolete."

Bank Receivers On Salaries: Saving

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A saving of $7,368,000 was effected for depositors of closed banks through substitution of a salary basis for receivers in place of the 10 per cent fee basis early last year, State Auditor J. Oscar Nelson announced today.

The average salary paid receivers of 341 closed banks, Nelson said, was $198. The total salary item was $842,000. With $82,000,000 liquidated, the receivers under the old free system would have collected $8,200,000.

The salaries ranged from $25 to bows. "After we corral your Dad, which according to Doby may be a job, we can spend our honeymoon here."

Dona sunk a heel into the soft earth. "I'm worried about Dad. I'm afraid we won't be able to handle him." There was a catch in her voice.

"Looks as though there is only one way," Dudley sat up beside Dona.

"What is that?" she asked eagerly.

"It sounds melodramatic but, found it, this whole thing is a bit colorful," Dudley began.

"It would be worth anything I possess to keep Dad out of a scrape," Dona's red lips parted softly in the patchy moonlight and her eyes shone. "Now you can see why I put up with the city. For five years I've been able to keep Dad away from trouble. He had to do his fighting over long distance telephone."

Dudley captured her hand and held it tight. "There is just one way and you have to listen to me until I've planned it all."

Dona nodded but her lips closed suddenly.

"Your Dad is a good sport. He's a man who can't be told what to do but he will do the right thing. Now all you have to do is to marry me tonight." He did not try to draw her into his arms but waited, watching the color play in her satin cheeks.

Dona remained silent, thinking of many things. Suddenly she was not sure. Her head was a whirl of racing thoughts. The plan was almost sure to work but could she do it? Did she love Dudley Winters? Many times she had thought she did and again she was not sure.

"It isn't as if you were not going to do it anyway, dear. I love you madly and I believe you love me," Dudley burst out, unable to control himself any longer.

"I'm just not sure," Dona's voice was small and faltering. "Oh, Dud, if I only knew! Does anyone ever know?"

"You're just worried, dear. I'll make it my full-time job to make you love me." Unable to fight back the surge of emotion that swept over him he caught her in his arms.

Then Dona remembered Seth Doby's words, "Swede Delo means to get his man this time." With an effort she arose. Instantly he was beside her and had captured both her hands.

"You must marry me, darling!" His voice was husky.

Dona tilted her face upward and her cheeks shone white and free from color. Quietly she answered, "I will marry you tonight, Dud."

A dark shadow had moved across the patch of moonlight and halted behind a squaw berry bush just as Dudley made his plea. When Dona answered the shadow shrank back and was blotted out by the blackness of the clump of bushes.

"I'll run and tell the parson," Dudley's voice shook.

"We haven't any license," Dona's voice spoke a doubt that had leaped into her mind unbidden.

Dudley waved a white paper. "I got one to use when I won our little bet. Got it last night." He hesitated to see how she would take this.

"Where will we be married? Why can't I go with you to that parson?" Dona did not want to be left alone just then.

"It would be romantic to be married here in the moonlight. Don't you think?" Dudley put the question eagerly. "The parson's place is a bit out of order."

"I know the place and how dirty it is," Dona laughed as she thought of the Impression Sam Dean's cabin would make on the scrupulous Dudley. "All right. Bring him here. He has the ceremony memorized."

DUDLEY sped away, leaping over low bushes as he ran. He vanished into the night and Dona walked slowly toward the white square of moonlight. She was troubled and her heart was pounding wildly. Was she doing the right thing?

Suddenly there was a soft step behind her and the swish of boot heels through the short grass. Dona whirled and saw a wide hat sweep downward as a lanky form took shape before her. Strong arms gripped her shoulders. Before she could free herself she had been kissed squarely upon the lips. Her assistant laughed softly as he freed her and stepped back into the white square of moonlight.

"Stanley Black!" Dona gasped, forgetting in her amazement to be angry at this unwarranted liberty.

Stanley bowed and smiled. "A kiss for the bride," he said in an even voice that held a hint of irony.

Dona stood transfixed, staring at him as though she was gazing upon an apparition. Stanley Black had changed since she last saw him. Even the white moonlight could not hide that. There was a mocking light behind hard gray eyes and his mouth had a queer twist. But the change was not all in his face. Dona sensed it rather than saw it. He was under a strain that he could not hide from her. She stepped into the moonlight and held out her hand. Somehow she had no thought of reproach. She was afraid of something and she did not know what it was.

Stanley did not take the proffered hand. Below them Dudley's voice could be heard guiding the steps of the parson. He was close and might see that Dona had a companion.

With a lift of his broad shoulders Stanley Black whirled and vanished into the night.

Dona stood looking after him. She took two steps, then halted as Dudley's voice broke through the moonlight.

"All set, fair one?" He was beside himself with happiness and could not conceal it.

Compton family of Portland, Mrs. Compton was formerly Julia Schoenholz of Scarboro. Leaving Portland they proceeded to Pasadena, Cal., where Mr. Thompson has a brother living.

Several from this vicinity drove to Springfield to see Vernie Durin who is confined in the Palmer sanatorium.

Fred Wagner, former resident of this vicinity but now of Davis Junction, suffered a fracture of the right arm when his team became frightened and ran away while he was engaged in filling a silo.

C. T. Yetter with Mr. and Mrs. R. Hough drove to Chicago to visit J. P. Yetter who is ill.

Mrs. Catherine Byrd passed away Wednesday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. I. R. Apple after a lingering illness. She had attained the age of 87 years. Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the house and at 2:30 at the church, Rev. George Walter officiating and with interment in the family lot in Twin Grove cemetery.

A new corn crib is being built on the Truckenbrod farm on the Mendota highway.

Tells of Tragedy

Mrs. P. J. Schoenholz received a paper, "The Fallon Eagle" from her sister, Mrs. George W. Lattin of Fallon, Nev., telling of the tragic death of the latter's husband, George W. Lattin.

Mr. Lattin was born near Shabbona, Ill., and grew to manhood in that vicinity. He received his early education in the schools there, later graduating from the East Paw Paw seminary.

His sister, Mrs. Alma Criswell visited in Shabbona five years ago and Mr. and Mrs. Lattin were here at the same time. Another sister, Mrs. Ella Mercer lives in Aurora.

The account of the tragedy follows:

Fallon and community were shocked Wednesday morning by the news of the tragedy which took the life of George W. Lattin, 74, highly respected rancher of the Union district, who fell victim to an attack by a bull.

Mr. Lattin's chest was crushed and it is thought that he died instantly.

There were no witnesses to the tragedy, which, however is believed to have resulted from an attempt by Mr. Lattin to head the animal off and turn him back to the pen where the gate of the corral near where the body was found by Paul Sandoz, a neighbor, whose son Neil had heard a commotion and shouted to his father that he thought he had seen a bull toss a man.

The animal about eight years old had never exhibited a vicious streak, according to Ralph Lattin, a son, who reached the ranch soon after his father was found, said that although he had never been in the practice to allow the bull out in the corral, it seemed likely from evidence from which he reconstructed the story of what must have happened, that Mr. Lattin had turned the animal out of the pen and that then, seeing the bull making for the gate which leads from the corral to the pasture, had seemed to try to head it off. Carrying the pitchfork with which he had been throwing hay to the cows. The broken pitchfork was found near the body. It is believed, Ralph said, that his father struck at the bull with the fork and that the bull lunged at the same time, throwing the aged man to the ground, and that then the animal lunged once more, crushing Mr. Lattin's chest between his head and the bank of a slight depression into which the accident victim had fallen.

The bull was not apparently angry when he reached him, Mr. Sandoz said. The Sandoz line fence is only about 200 feet from the corral gate where Mr. Lattin fell, and while the boy Neil ran to the house for Mrs. Lattin, Mr. Sandoz hurried to Mr. Lattin where he found the bull standing quietly. Mr. Sandoz was able to grasp a chain about four feet in length, which hung from the bull's horn stubs and passed through the ring in its nose and lead the animal to the fence where he tied it.

Mr. Lattin was dead when his wife and the Sandoz boy picked him up and laid him in the shade, it is believed. Dr. Meyers was called immediately but said that life was extinct when he first examined the body.

Mr. Lattin was 74 years old in April and had been a resident of this community 23 years. He was a man of fine character and high ideals whose unswerving devotion to his principals earned him the respect of all who knew him. Given up by physicians who gave him a year to live when he moved to Nevada for his health, he had battled successfully for health against odds, living to contribute much to the development of his community and to stamp indelibly upon family and friends the influence of an honorable and upright career.

Just a little more than a year ago children and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Lattin gathered at the old home to help Mr. Lattin and his loyal and devoted helpmate to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary. Mr. Lattin was a graduate of Northwestern university law school, a class mate of William Jennings Bryan, on July 15, 1881. He was united in marriage with Sarah Van Patten who survives him. For a time they lived in Chicago, moving from there to South Dakota where they resided for 27 years, during which time Mr. Lattin practiced law and was for ten years the publisher of a leading South Dakota paper. He also served for 16 years on the bench as county judge of Tewskaup county, S. D. He became captain of volunteers during the Spanish American War and served for 17 months in the Philippines as captain of Company E, first South Dakota volunteers, in which capacity he earned an enviable reputation for skill and courage of high order. It was in 1909 the family moved to Nevada to take up life on the ranch where he met his tragic death.

Eight children survive, besides his widow, 18 grandchildren and one great grandchild. The children are Mrs. Mary Hollister of Madison, S. D., who arrived Friday to attend the funeral, Mrs. Lois May whose husband is the principal of an Indian school at Santa Fe, N. M., who was expected to arrive today, Mrs. A. T. Harrison of Oakland, Cal., Will Lattin, principal of the high school at Frankfort, Ky., Herbert Lattin, Ralph and Mark Lattin, the latter three named living in Fallon.

Funeral services in charge of A. C. M. of which the deceased was a member will be held this morning at 10 o'clock at the fraternal hall. Following the Masonic services at the hall, there will be a sermon by the Rev. Stephen C. Thomas of the Methodist church following the Masonic services at the grave. There will be a committal service with full military honors conducted by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of which Mr. Lattin was a member with the American Legion participating.

A call for help came from the Charles Krahenbuhl farm about ten o'clock Sunday morning to fight a fire which was raging in the hay loft. Charlie was setting upon the front porch when a sudden puff of smoke lifted the roof off the barn. It is thought that spontaneous combustion started the fire as they had just filled the mow with some fifty tons of hay the day previous.

The fire did not stop with the barn but took in a corn crib which stood some fifty feet away and which contained 2800 bushels of corn. A large part of the machinery which had been stored in the driveway of the crib and in a machine shed attached to the barn was also destroyed so that Charlie doesn't even have a wagon or harness with which to pick corn. The loss is estimated at $3,500 and is only partially covered by insurance.

TODAY IS THE WORLD WAR ANNIVERSARY

FRENCH VILLAGES BURNED

On Sept. 17, 1918, Germans burned French villages along the Moselle as American and French forces advanced. Allied artillery retaliated by shelling the fortress of Metz.

American forces in Lorraine advanced on a front of five miles in one of the first offensives in that sector in many months. Their progress was difficult because of the rough country.

Allied troops continued their victorious progress in the offensive against Bulgarians taking many towns and thousands of prisoners. The flank of the First Bulgarian Army was turned and it was forced to begin a retreat into its own territory.

In a curt note, the United States rejected the Austrian proposal for a peace conference.
